Remember North Wales
Deaf Association in your
Will

Your gift could change
the life of a deaf person

North Wales Deaf Association

Giving Deaf, deafened, deafblind and hard of hearing people an opportunity to live life to the full by providing equal access to services, education, employment and facilities.

Making a Will

Making a will is not as difficult or expensive as you may think and may be one of the most important things you do.

You will need a will if you want to look after your family and friends and to remember your favourite charities, like NWDA. Without a will, you won't have a say in what happens when you are no longer around.

Where do I start?

It is best to use a Solicitor, who will be able to advise you on legal aspects, different ways to make a will and to make sure it is a correct legal document..

Up dating a will

Some times you may want to change your will. Most minor changes can be made by adding a codicil.

A legacy gift to NWDA can be added to an existing will by a codicil.

There are three ways in which you can leave your gift to North Wales Deaf Association:

A residuary gift

After providing for friends and family, many of our supporters decide to leave the residue of their estate, or a percentage of the residue, to North Wales Deaf Association. This is a particularly popular way to leave a gift to charity as the gift increases in line with inflation.

A cash gift

A cash gift is a fixed amount of money. It is important to remember that cash gifts do decrease in value over time and therefore may need to be reviewed from time to time.

A gift in kind

A gift in kind is an item you decide to leave to North Wales Deaf Association and could be property, shares, a piece of art work or an antique etc.
